Confused by the screams of the women and children in the wagon, he attempted to pass on the left-hand side of the road and the machine dronped over the embankment, turning over twice and landing right side up against a fence, fifty feet from the roadway.

Stilicho and the Goths

BY REV. THOS. B. GREGORY

F IFTEEN hundred and ten years Hago-March 11, 403—the great Stilicho won the title of the "Sec-ond Marius," by turning back the great barbarian mass at Pollentia. The bordes of Marie and the le-gions of Stillcho fought all day, the fortune of the day. the fortune of the day veering now to one side and now to the other, and when the darkness of night put an end to the carnage the Gothic hosts were still on the field, defiant as ever. But when the morning came and the legionaries were proparing themselves for a renewal of the combat it was discovered that the Barbarians had "folded their tents like the Arabs, and silently slipped away." They had had enough. The terrible pounding that Stilicho gave them, with the fear of a worse one to follow, was more than they had bargained for, and the Eternal City was saved. To have won the victory of Pollentia was glory enough for any man; but four years later Stil-icho was called upon to give the second proof of his military prowess and to win another famous vic-tory. In 406 there youred down upon the sunny plains of Italy a mighty multitude of Vandals. nighty multitude of Vandals, Suevi, Burgundians and other Barbariaus, led by the fierce Radagaisus, one of the most terrible characters of history, who, it seems, had bound himself by a solemn yow to his pagan deities to reduce Rome to "a heap of stones and ashes." Vandals.

Crossing the Alps, the Po and the Apennine, the vast tide of hu-manity feamed and frothed toward Rome. City after city was sacked and pillaged and their inhabitants to the sword, and presently wave reached Florence. That beautiful place was as strong as it was fair, and refusing to surrender, the barbarian king resolved to take siege.

Radagaisus at Florence, only 180 miles away, the senate and people of Rome trembled as and people of Rome trembled as they had not trembled since the time of Hannibal, and all eyes turned imploringly toward the hero of Pollentia. If he could not save them their case was hopeless. In the meantime, Stilicho was on the way to Florence, where he arrived in good time. Instead of attacking the Barbarians in the open field, however, Stilicho, with confield, however, Stilicho, with con-summate tact and expedition, en-compassed the enemy with strong lines of circumvalation, and in-stead of being the besiegers the barbarians found themselves the

SEVEN BIG DAYS FOR UTAH CHAUTAUQUA

Week's Series of Sessions Will Be Filled With Many Special Features.

PROGRAMME IS VARIED

Noted Lecturers Are on Hand and Athletic Sports Have a Place.

Special to The Tribune. OGDEN, July 20 .- With the first two or three days devoted largely to preparation and preliminary organization of various institutions, the patrons of the third annual Utah Chautauqua assembly will find the last seven days, beginning Monday morning, the most important and beneficial of the entire ten days' meet-ing. Each day of the week will bring some new form of entertainment, a new speaker and some new features in con-nection with the work of the Chautauqua reanizations.

The Junior Chautauqua, the Camera club and the Chautauqua Round Table were among the institutions re-established in connection with the assembly on Friday and Saturday. Mrs. Ida B. Cole, representative of the Chautauqua institution, will conduct the 5 o'clock round table meetings and also will be in charge of the 10 o'clock hour. Mrs. Cole was organizer and director of the first Summer Art and Craft school in St. Louis and is also prominent in club work in that city. During the assembly she will deliver two lectures on art. Illustrated by full-sized reproductions of the world's greatest masterpieces. he world's greatest masterpieces

Sports Will Be Feature.

The work of arranging athletic sports during the Chautauqua has been placed in the hands of W. L. Underwood, principal of the Madison school, and Miss Lucille Thurman, supervisor of physical culture in the Ogden city schools. They have divided the children into groups according to their age and size. During the week there will be games especially suited for each group and an experienced teacher will be in charge of each group. One of the unique features of this year's Chautauqua is the maintenance of a kindergarten department or day nursery where experienced teachers look after the little tots while mothers attend other departments of the assembly. Instead of Miss Nina Lamkin, as in the two former assembles. Miss Lucille Thurman is at the head of the Junior Chautauqua movement this year. This institution is closely alled with the athletic department and a complete programme of entertainment for the younger Chautauquans has been outlined for the week.

Bishon McConnell Coming.

Bishop McConnell Coming.

Bishop Francis J. McConnell, of the Rocky Mountain district of the Methodist church, one of the most important personages of the assembly, comes to the Chautauqua on Monday. Dr. McConnell, a former president of DuPaw university, bears the distinction of being the youngest bishop ever elected by the Methodist Dpiscopal church. He is a forceful and rapid-fire speaker who stops when he has made his point. There is a special interest in the appearance of when he has made his point. There is a special interest in the appearance of Bishop McConnell on the lecture platform at this particular time because of the fact that he was sent to Mexico by his church to investigate conditions in Mexico City when the Madero regime was overthrown. He has promised to tell some of his audiences during the week of his experiences and what he discovered in the blood-stained country. Dr. McConnell will also have charge of the Bible hour at 9 o'clock in the morning during the entire week.

For a lecturer to appear on a Chautauoua programme six days out of a week is something unusual but the association feels that no mistake has been

Music Not Neglected.

The third concert of their Chautauqua engagement will be given by the Brahms, vocalists and instrumentalists, on Monday evening. The organization is a quartette made up of finished musicians who have engaged in concert work throughout the cities of the east.

The afternoon programme will be under the direction of Ogden women, with a short address by Mrs. Emeline B. Wells, president of the World's Women's Relief society; Mrs. J. A. Gorham, president of the State Pederation of Women's clubs, and Mrs. C. H. McMahon, a member of the national federation. Wednesday will also mark the first introduction to Chautauqua patrons of Prof. William A. McKeever, professor of philosophy in the Kansas Agricultural college. The subject of his first lecture, to be delivered in the afternoon, will be "A Better Crop of Men and Women." Another new speaker will make his appearance in the evening, when Colonel George W. Bain, a Kentucky orator, lectures on "A Searchlight of the Twentieth Century."

With D. O. McKay and his assistants in charge of the special programme Thursday, July 24, will be given almost entirely to the Pioneer celebration. All persons over 70 years of age will be admitted to the grounds free on that day as guests of the Chautauqua association. The principal feature of the celebration will be a Pioneer pageant consisting of floats illustrating the history of Ulah from the early explorations to statehood. There will be a parade at 10:30 o'clock, forming on Washington avenue and proceeding to the Chautauqua gua grounds.

In the afternoon there will be a concert by the Federation band and an address, "The Pioneers," by Major Richard W. Young. The dramatic event of the entire assembly will occur on Thursday evening, with the presentation of "A Midsummer Night's Dream" by Miss Maud May Babcock and the members of the University of Utah Dramatic club.

Two concerts, afternoon and evening, by the Symphony orchestra of Salt Lake, will make the Friday programme one of special interest to music lovers. As in the past two assemblies, Saturday will be Children's day, with special readings by William H. Head, dramatic interprelines, but in every instance they were beaten back, and in due course of time famine, aided by the Roman spears, battle axes and catapults, did its work.

It is not pleasant to remember that the great man who had twice saved Rome from the Barbarians was, two years after his defeat of Radagaisus, put to death by his sovereign upon the hollow charge sovereign upon the hollow charge of treason to the state. Calm in his consciousness of innocence, and perhaps stunned by the character of his accessation. Stilicho, with a firmness not unworthy or the last of the Roman generals, submitted his neck to the sword of Hera-clean ter and impersonator, and an illustrated lecture on "Prehistoric Utah" by Pref. Byron Cummings, professor of languages at the University of Utah. A children's exhibition in the afternoon will also be a special feature of the day's programme. The programme for Sunday, July 27, the closing day of the assembly, is made up of lectures and music. Bishop Mcthe closing day of the assembly, is made up of lectures and music. Bishop Mc-Connell will deliver an address at the union service in the morning: Judge William H. King is given the afternoon hour followed by a concert of sacred music by the Federation band in the late afternoon. Mr. Head will present the closing number of the week with a reading entitled "Job." The week's programme, consisting very largely of feature numbers by Utah entertainers, is regarded by the association officials as the best six days' programme ever prepared for a Chantauqua meeting in this city.

COMMUNICATION.

The Tribune has received the following ommunication respecting the matter of etter equipped homes:

We have heard many eloquent addresses this week in the various departments of education, and all were buoyant with valuable suggestions, theories and advice. tions, theories and advice.

The new ideas expounded in reference to vocational training, the use of the habit card by teachers in the schoolroom, suggested by Superintendent Alderman of Oregon, and many other subjects treated of as much needed in our schools, all go to show that the real deficiency in the education of our children does not lie so much in the fallacy of our school curriculum as in the allaround development of the character of the individual child.

around development of the character of the individual child.

Educators for some time have been striving to attain this end, and have consequently more work to do than is possible for them to do, in the few hours the children are intrusted to their care.

Parents must realize the public school capped do exerciting for the Parents must realize the public school cannot do everything for the child, for after all the home is our greatest and most important institution, the best place for the individual study of the child, and without its co-operation the best results cannot be obtained.

We must consider the truth of this as does Henry Van Dyke, who says, in substance, if not verbatim:

"Keep thy home with all dillgence, for out of it are the issues of life. Whether the home be a hut or a palace, whether it is situated in the heart of a city, in the country village or alone amid the silence of the prai-

or alone amid the silence of the prairie and forest, its walls shut out the world and shut in those whose lives are bound together for better lives are bound together for better or worse. Other institutions, such as schools, churches, libraries, asylums, hospitals, poor farins and prisons, exist only to help out the home or take up the individual when the home falls."

We cannot lay the crimes of our country more to any one thing than the lack of home training, for it has been said that crime is misdirected energy, and it is the duty and responsibility of every mother to direct the activities of her children even more than it is the duty of the teachers, and it is well for them to remember to begin early in the life of her children, for we cannot turn back the leaves of time and give the child opportunities for development when the mind is receptive and he is when the mind is receptive and he is eager and athirst for the ideal in literature and art. We must therefore conclude that f our schools cannot obtain the best results without proper equipment, our homes likewise cannot get any better results. It is a deplorable fact that with all

It is a deplorable fact that with all the suggestions and helps as to the best way to develop our children physically, mentally, morally and spiritually, which may be had almost merely for the asking, we find thousands of the homes of our land lacking in an atmosphere of culture.

So I would suggest that more of the mothers and fathers set about and mothers and fathers set about and concern themselves as to how they can, best equip their homes with the best of books, pictures, recreation that is educational, consider more the sanitary conditions of the homes the sanitary conditions of the homes as well as the schools, measure the results of correct habits, as suggested by Mr. Alderman—habits of posture, correct speech, modulation of voice, industry, health, neatness, leadership, judgment, sympathy, follow the bent of their minds, as is suggested by the vocational training in schools because of the conditions of the conditio in schools, encourage and develop ove of nature while they are young and are one with the flowers, butterflies, bees and birds. And by so doing better and surer results can be obtained than by leaving these important steps in the formation of character entirely to our schools and teachers, who are already condemned. teachers, who are already condemned for crowding the minds of the chil-

But the perfection of our school system alone cannot develop thinkers without the co-operation of the home, and I will conclude by saying if we take a peep into the history of the world we will see that the downfall of a nation started and ended in the corruption of the homes. Truly the home is the heart of the world, and we must set about and learn ways and means of perfecting it as well as the schools and other institutions for good. In order to it as well as the schools and other institutions for good. In order to have an all-round developed indi-vidual. BESSIE LEE HARRIS.
